The Mighty Battle

A Warhammer Story by Matthew Bonthron

With help from Grampa (John Bonthron)

The Mighty Battle

This short Warhammer story was written by Matthew (aged 7) for his friend Edward (aged 8).

It tells of a mighty battle between the Orks, led by Gaz Skull (Matthew's Army) and the Bloodletters, led by Khorn (Edward's Army).

This story contains scenes of necessary violence.

The Mighty Battle

In the dark of the grim future there is only war.

The Orks were gathered in the Zenos Trench, near the camp of the Bugworms.

They aimed their heavy guns at the Bugworms and fired.

The Orks knew they were safe from attack because giant hovercraft flown by Groks were circling the planet Zenos.

And then a blast of plasma come out of the planet releasing Bloodletters who leapt out to challenge the Orks. At once the Orks charged at the Bloodletters and the Groks fired their cannons from above.

The Mighty Battle

A giant scrap machine called an Ork Killa Kan rumbled into the battle with its chainsaw arm revving up to kill.

The Killa Kan smashed through the armplates of the Bloodletters and launched a missile at the captain of the Bloodletters who was called Khorn. The missile bounced off his armour.

Khorn was infuriated and pulled out a KurseStik and hurled it at the Killa Kan which exploded, turning four nearby Orks to steaming pulp.

The Orks were enraged and summoned a mighty Gorkanaut which launched four Heavy Missiles at Khorn and blew him up into blood which spread all over the Bloodletters, melting them into steaming plasma.

To celebrate, the Orks had a party and took precautions to strengthen their gaze and sent Ork Trukks to look for other Bloodletter portals.

The Mighty Battle

The Orks' giant spaceship was evacuating Orks to return them to their home planet of Grumora.

The spaceship was equipped with massive cannon and the Orks knew they would be safe.

Fully loaded with the entire Ork Army, the spaceship rose quickly and set course for Grumora.

On reaching home, the Orks discovered that during their absence a massive Bloodletter portal had opened up on Grumora to allow millions of Bloodletters to stream onto their surface of their planet.

As they left the spaceship, the last of the defensive Killa Kans on Grumora were blown up.

The Mighty Battle

The furious Orks attacked the Bloodletters and pelted them with lead, causing the enemy to explode, turning the entire surface of Grumora to turn red, the colour of Bloodletters' blood.

Infuriated by this unexpected Bloodletters' attack, the Orks clambered back aboard their giant spaceship and set course for DemonAir, the home planet of the Bloodletters.

Here they were met by thousands of millions of Bloodletters led by Khorn Himself. Only then did the Orks realise that earlier it had been Khorn Hologram they had destroyed.

Enraged beyond control at this deception, one angry Ork fired a lead bullet at Khorn but missed and the bullet lodged in the ear canal of a nearby Bloodletter causing it to die a gruesome and painful death.

Everything went quiet, nothing moved.

Suddenly the Bloodletters charged, swords scything as they raced at the Orks who charged back, fearless as ever, firing their machine guns filling the air with a wall of lead bullets and exterminating the enemy.

The Mighty Battle

Due to the huge numbers of Bloodletters the Orks were also destroyed.

Only Khorn the leader of the Bloodletters and Gaz Skull the War Boss of the Orks were left standing.

Gaz Skull, swung his Choppa around in a viscous circle and running forward then rising to his full height he smashed his Choppa down splitting open the skull of Khorn Himself.

As the Choppa swung towards his head, Khorn, in a final act of revenge, stabbed Gaz Skull with his plasma dagger, piercing his lungs.

The Mighty Battle

Gaz Skull immediately burst into smoke and blood.

Khorn the dying Bloodletter king, still with the Choppa embedded in his skull, crawled forward to grasp the banner of the Bloodletters and stabbed it into hillside next to the banner of the Orks.

The battle was over.

It would be thousands of years before they would again rise to become pests again.

The End.
